Berryman back in the saddle

Nottingham law firm, Berryman, has confirmed it is to continue its sponsorship of the Saturday schedule of the Belton Horse Trials this year.

Organised by Stuart and Anna Buntine, the 2008 Belton Park Horse Trials run from Friday 11th to Sunday 13th April, and once again are set to attract some of the leading horse and rider combinations and thousands of spectators to its stunning 17th century Lincolnshire National Trust property venue.

Traditionally seen as a warm-up for Badminton Horse Trials, this year's Belton has a new 'international status' with a CIC qualifying event for this summer's Olympic Games in Hong Kong, that is rumoured will attract some of the world's best competitors including Britain's potential Olympic riders as they bid for a coveted squad place.

Berryman's marketing director, Sue Carr comments: "Stuart and Anna continue to do great things with the Belton event; gate numbers are at a record high and year on year they bring innovations that add value to competitors and visitors alike, and this year's international status brings a really exciting new dimension. We are really looking forward to providing our clients with a day of family entertainment at the horse trials and are keeping our fingers crossed for good weather and an exciting day's competition.

"The sponsorship fits in perfectly with our strategic focus on the sports sector," she adds. "We work with a diverse range of professional sports businesses, sports clubs and sports individuals, helping to make sure their interests are protected."
